Baldwin Wallace College,
Berea, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

From a personal interest in a group of men of the past generation who collected fossil fish in northeastern Ohio, and from the desire to know just a little more of these men personally, I am moved to address you regarding two, one of whom and possibly both, were connected with Baldwin Wallace College. Will you please give me a brief resumé of the official connections of the two following men with Baldwin Wallace College, and something of their academic history.

The Reverend H. Herzer,

The Reverend William Kepler.

I am in a fair way to learn something of the personal history of Herzer through both a son and a daughter, but of Kepler I know next to nothing. If you can furnish me with a brief personal biography, I will be greatly obliged. By this last I mean place and date of birth and death, where he was trained, what his interests, with something of his personality as a man, teacher and scholar.

Do you possess photographs of these individuals which you would consent to place on loan with a local photographer that I may have copies made? This last also particularly applies to Kepler.

In the course of a few days or weeks, I hope to visit Berea again to follow up these inquiries.

Very truly yours,

J. E. Hyde
